

GTU DEAN'S NEWSLETTER

VOLUME 17, ISSUE 8 MAY 2013

ENDINGS AND BEGINNINGS

Dr. Arthur Holder
Academic Dean & Vice President of Academic Affairs

I recently watched the televised funeral for former British prime minister Margaret Thatcher at St. Paul's Cathedral in London. Both the program booklet and the sermon by the Bishop of London quoted some lines from T. S. Eliot's poem Little Gidding (1942):

*What we call the beginning is often the end
And to make an end is to make a beginning.
The end is where we start from.*

How appropriate those lines are for reflection at the end of a life—not just a life of historic significance on the world stage, but of each individual's life. Eliot's words also ring true for us as we come to the end of an academic year during which we have celebrated the 50th anniversary of the GTU. "The end is where we start from."

It has become a well-worn cliché to note that "graduation" from an academic degree program is at the same time the "commencement" of a new stage in life. Nevertheless, it is certainly true for the soon-to-be graduates of the GTU and its member schools that this month is both an end and a beginning. Sometimes that means a new job or career in a new location; sometimes it means the beginning of another degree program here or at some other institution. In any case, there are bags to be packed, plans to be made, and goodbyes to be said.

But it is not only the graduates who face an end-that-is-a-beginning this month. For those who remain here, there will soon be more changes as new students, faculty, and staff arrive to take the place of those who are going away. And beyond the usual succession of faces that happens every year, we can expect some significant institutional changes as well. "What we call the beginning is often the end."

Higher education is undergoing a revolution in both form and content, while most of our religious communities are experiencing transformations more dramatic than they have seen in decades, or perhaps centuries. All of these shifts are affecting the GTU schools and affiliates, often in ways that we would never have foreseen or predicted. There are many voices telling us that we simply cannot do the same things in the same way any longer. But there will be new challenges to meet, and new dreams to pursue. "To make an end is to make a beginning."

In such times of transition, we do well to return to the fundamental values and commitments that brought us here—both as institutions and as individuals. In that sense, the future will bring us back to the place where we began, but it will be different because we ourselves will have changed. As Eliot goes on to say:

*With the drawing of this Love and the voice of this Calling
We shall not cease from exploration
And the end of all our exploring
Will be to arrive where we started
And know the place for the first time.*

DHARMA AT TIMES OF NEED: MAY 3-4

Dharma at Times of Need: The Interface of Chaplaincy and Ministry

Fundamental to the teachings of Buddhism is a description of the human condition as one of suffering, frustration and disappointment. A deep understanding of this condition is the necessary step toward living with and through that actuality, especially when we are confronted by that actuality in its starkest terms--the death of a loved one, a terminal illness, loss of hope, anguish. This two-day symposium will explore the ways that engaging the insights of the Dharma can benefit people at the times of greatest suffering, frustration and disappointment, and the role of minister and chaplain in assisting others at and through those times of need.
